Presented by Richard Thompson

We're pleased to invite you to a special presentation at the Brooks Depot Day and the 2nd Annual Train and Trolley Fest at Powerland Heritage Park featuring historian and author Richard Thompson, who has spent 50 years exploring Portland's electric railway history.

Richard is a native Oregonian whose interest in streetcars began as a child, riding Portland's last streetcar line to Oregon City with his grandmother. With family roots in Linn County and a master's degree from the University of Oregon, he's built a career as a public historian, writer, and consultant. His work includes several books and contributions to documentaries like Streetcar City from Oregon Public Broadcasting.

This is a great chance to learn about the rich and unusual history of streetcars and interurban railways in the Willamette Valley—their forgotten stories and how they helped shape the region we know today.

We hope you'll join us! Light snacks and non-alcoholic beverages will be available.
